Leo Martin

Leo Martin, an educator and expert on the early history of our nation, has been called "the last God-fearing guide in historic Plymouth, MA." While so many others are taking God out of the history books, Leo maintains that the Pilgrims and Founding Fathers established "one nation under God," founded on Judeo-Christian values and on a Covenant made with God.

A true patriot and historian, Leo Martin is the Education Director at The Jenney Interpretive Centre in Plymouth, MA, where he is known for his service giving historical tours and speeches dressed in Pilgrim costume. He is a champion of our nation's founding principles displayed in the National Monument to the Forefathers in Plymouth. His book, "Pilgrim Pursuit of Happiness" talks about the five liberties the Pilgrims were searching for when they left the church of England and came to the New World and is the subject of one of the exhibits at The Jenney.

An excellent story-teller, Leo and his wife Nancy speak around the country on a variety of subjects relating to the Pilgrims and the founding of our country. In the past few years, they have been featured on Kirk Cameron's "One on One" television show and David Barton's Thanksgiving show on tbn.org and on the 700 Club and Glenn Beck's podcast on the Pilgrims in 2019.

Leo and Nancy have been married for over forty-five years and have three grown children and four grandchildren. They have been working together in Plymouth since 2001 preserving the Christian heritage of our country.
